Army Will Deactivate Div. Now in Germany, Another May Be Returned From Far East

The Army is expected to announce shortly after conclusion of the Summit Meeting in Geneva that an infantry division now in Germany—it will probably be the 4th—will be deactivated.

This disclosure will come on the heels of a report by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson at Quantico, Va., on Sunday, 17 July, that an Army division in the Far East will be redeployed to the ZI by the end of the current fiscal year—possibly to be deactivated also or merged with another division.

Speculation has centered on the prospective return of the 1st Cavalry Division, although this is not yet certain. The other divisions in the Far East are the Army's 7th Infantry Division in Korea and the 24th Infantry Division, split between Korea and Japan, and the Marine Corps 3d Division, with one

Navy Cops Publicity On Army Flying Machine

The Army—not the Navy which took full credit for it, or the Air Force which also has a high interest in vertical flying—is paying 100 per cent of current costs for development of the "wingless flying platform," THE JOURNAL learned this week.

Defense Department officials confirmed the fact that the Army is carrying the cost of the research and development project. Some in the Army think the flying platform could revolutionize battlefield troop mobility.

But there was no indication that the Army was involved in the futuristic project in any way whatsoever when the Defense Department declassified it on 10 April.

The first paragraph of that official release stated: "The Navy today announced the existence of a small wingless 'flying platform' which has made short successful flights carrying a pilot. Designed and built by Hiller Helicopters, Palo Alto, Calif., the machine is a research tool developed under the auspices of the Office of Naval Research."

That is correct. The ONR and the Navy have cognizance of the Hiller plant. But the fact is that it's an Army-motivated project.

How many other research and development projects the Army is sponsoring in the field of flying could not be ascertained.

Naval War College President Reports

Next week's issue of THE JOURNAL will carry a special report by VAdm. Lynde D. McCormick, USN, president, on the Naval War College—oldest of the military war colleges.

Admiral McCormick describes how the famed Newport, R. I., institution is meeting the challenge of training senior Navy officers, as well as officers of other Services, for top assignments.

Quantico III

Though President Eisenhower was forced for the first time to forego the sessions at Quantico, Va., for the summit at Geneva, Switzerland, the third annual Secretaries Conference at the Marine Corps Schools, 14-17 July, provided considerable high-level action.

In addition to giving Lt. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, USA, an opportunity to take three golf trophies back to his Second Army Headquarters at Ft. Meade, Md. (Next Page), the work-play conference provided these developments:

1. Admiral Radford stressed the urgent requirement of continued action to improve "career attractiveness," and thereby assure maximum combat effectiveness.
2. General Taylor urged versatility and flexibility in military planning; called for "integrated atomic capability."—Page 1403.
3. Admiral Carney reported Soviet gains; said U. S. naval strength down, but not commitments.—Page 1398.
4. Generals Twining and LeMay tell of AF punching power; place emphasis on top-notch personnel.—Page 1400.
5. General Shepherd outlines new strategic concepts developed by Marines for atomic warfare.—Page 1398.
6. Editorial comment.—Page 1402.

$39 Million Reserve RIF Pay Studied

Almost 17,000 Reserve officers would get $39 million "force out" pay if Congress makes the proposed readjustment pay bill retroactive to fiscal year '52.

This fact was brought out during hearings before the Brooks House Armed Services Subcommittee, which asked the Pentagon to furnish detailed RIF data going back to the end of the Korean war.

The Defense Department said 14,448 officers released during the past four fiscal years would be eligible for the readjustment pay if the proposal should

HERE'S MORE ON FAMILY CARE SLASH

An "acute reduction" in medical personnel at the Army's huge Airborne Center, Ft. Bragg, N. C., has forced a drastic reduction in medical care for children, THE JOURNAL has learned in response to our request ("Tell the Facts" editorial, 9 July) for reports from the field on the worsening situation.

At Bragg, the Pediatric Clinic henceforth will be open only from 1300-1500 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Since the post has only one trained pediatrician, priorities will be required. Medical authorities there are distributing a publication called "Medical Care At Home" in order to help parents decide if a case is of an emergency nature or not.

Elsewhere in this issue, there are additional reports and comments on the Family Medical Care problem, including Readers' Views on page 1402.

PENTAGON MANAGERS — Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson, left, is shown here with Deputy Secretary Designate Reuben S. Robertson, jr., during the Quantico Conference. Mr. Robertson, 47, served in the Army from March 1943 to September 1945, advancing from captain to lieutenant colonel. Mr. Wilson remarked that his new Deputy has first-hand knowledge on manpower problems: he is the father of four sons and two daughters.

HOOVER ACTION

Three million members of the Armed Services and their dependents have a vital stake in the outcome of newly launched studies at the Defense Department into recommendations of the Hoover Commission. Affected will be such matters as family medical care, commissaries, post exchanges and overall Defense Department organization.

A special article on page 1395 recapitulates the major proposals of the Hoover Commission relating to the Armed Forces.

Deactivate Division

regiment, the 9th, on Okinawa, and another slated for assignment to that expanding bastion.

Some possibility exists that the Army will not return a division, but instead will cut Far East forces by an equivalent number of soldiers.

Announcement of plans to deactivate a USA Reur infantry division may be accelerated as a result of the Geneva sessions, where there has been emphasis on reduced military strength.

The Army has said that the 11th Airborne Division, now at Ft. Campbell, Ky., will replace the 5th Infantry Division at Augsburg, Germany, next January, with the 5th returning to Campbell.

Also slated for 1956 is the movement to Europe in May of the 3d Armored Division, which will team up with the 2d Armored Division, a key NATO unit.

The Army has not said what unit the 3d Armored will replace. It is seen certain however, that it will be an infantry division and that this division will be deactivated upon its return to the United States.

At present, the Army has 20 divisions. It must get down to 18 to meet requirements of the current fiscal year budget.

The 4th Infantry Division, which appears destined for deactivation, is now under command of Maj. Gen. Renaldo Van Brunt.

POW DEADLINE

Korean prisoners-of-war eligible for compensation from the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission must make their applications by midnight, 21 Aug., or lose their rights to claims.

Appoint Asst Sec AF

President Eisenhower has nominated Dudley C. Sharp, Houston, Tex., manufacturing executive, to succeed Assistant Secretary of the Air Force John Roger Lewis.

Secretary Lewis, in charge of AF Materiel, has resigned effective 30 Sept. 1955.

Assistant Secretary-Designate Sharp, 50, is President of the Mission Manufacturing Co., Houston, Tex. During WWII he served in the Navy.

Lt. Col. Growdon Retires

Lt. Col. John S. Growdon, USA-Ret., has ended 20 years' service with retirement in the office of Maj. Gen. John H. Hinds, USA, Assistant Chief of Staff, Development and Test, Headquarters Continental Army Command, Ft. Monroe, Va., under whom Colonel Growdon has served since 1952.

be made retroactive to July 1953. In addition, about 2,400 others are expected to be involuntarily released during the next 12 months.

As proposed by the Pentagon, the measure would affect only the latter group. It would cost approximately $5.6 million. If made retroactive to July 1953, the cost would be increased $33.4 million.

The Subcommittee also discussed the possibility of amending the measure to make the readjustment pay tax free.

Chances for enactment of the proposal during this session of Congress dimmed this week when the Subcommittee failed to complete hearings on the plan. With only a week remaining before the expected adjournment date, it appears likely the measure may go over until the second session.

Lt. Gen. Parks Top Golfer At Quantico; AF Are Best Shots; Navy Aces At Angling

Quantico, Va.

Lt. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, USA, frequent golfing partner of President Eisenhower, brought back to his Second Army Headquarters at Ft. Meade, Md., top golfing honors for the third annual Secretaries Conference here.

Shooting a 74 last Friday and a 76 on Saturday, in a foursome which included Vice President Richard M. Nixon, General Parks wound up with 150 for the 36-hole tournament. He also won the "closest to the pin" test on the 18th green with an approach that put him 9 feet 6 inches from the cup. Parks' drive of 271 yards won him the "longest drive" title.

Despite their prowess, Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas and General Nathan F. Twining, Air Force Chief of Staff, defeated Vice President Richard Nixon and General Parks by one point in their 18-hole match. The Vice President had a 48-49 for a 97 total. Secretary Thomas had 41-43-84 and General Twining had 42-43-85. Lt. Gen. Samuel E. Anderson, USAF, Director, Weapons System Evaluation Group, OASD (R&D), had a hole in one on the par three 139-yard 14th hole. The general used an eight iron. Last summer his wife made a hole in one on the 22d hole at the Army and Navy Country Club.

General Anderson was playing today in a foursome in which Maj. Gen. Eugene W. Ridings, USA, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, Continental Army Command, had a birdie two; Lt. Gen. Carter B. Magruder, Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics, USA, had a par three; and Maj. Gen. Jacob E. Smart, Assistant Vice Chief of Staff, USAF, had a bogie four.

Lt. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, USAF Deputy Chief of Staff, Personnel, and Lt. Gen. Leon W. Johnson, USAF Commander, Continental Air Command, were both on the line to tie for the Lucky Line event. Low net went to Maj. Gen. Dean C. Strouther, USAF, Acting Commander, Air University, 82-11-71.

General Maxwell D. Taylor, Chief of Staff, USA, and his four-man team defeated all comers in tennis.

RADM. Frederick P. Furth, Chief of Naval Research, had the longest lake fish: a 12 1/4 inch bass. V. Adm. Robert P. Briscoe, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Fleet Operations and Readiness), landed the longest stream fish, a 13 1/2 inch trout.

General Curtis E. LeMay, USAF, Commander in Chief, Strategic Air Command, broke 49x50 to win the skeet shoot. General O. P. Weyland, USAF, Commander, Tactical Air Command, fired a perfect score (150x150) on the FBI Combat Pistol Range.

New Pentagon Study Will Affect Millions In Service and Dependents

The three million members of the Armed Services, and their families, have a vested interest in a gigantic undertaking now getting up steam at the Pentagon.

A special Defense Department task force headed by the distinguished Boston lawyer and one-time Assistant Secretary of Defense, Mr. Charles A. Coolidge, is preparing to launch a careful study of changes recommended in the Defense structure by President Eisenhower's Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government.

The Hoover Commission, as it is commonly called, has bombarded the President, the Congress and the country with reports blasting the Armed Services for "waste and inefficiency" in practically every area of endeavor. The Commission urges numerous reforms which touch the lives of everyone in uniform.

Responsibility for studying the reports and determining the extent to which the recommendations should be put into effect has been turned over to the Coolidge group. Mr. Coolidge, a WWI company commander in France, was brought to the Pentagon for the express purpose of making the study. He has been appointed as a Special Assistant to Defense Secretary Wilson.

The Pentagon said this week that others are now being assembled to help him with the study.

The study group has a broad area to cover.

Eleven different Service fields were explored by Commission task forces. Changes were recommended in military medical care programs, research and development activities, intelligence, transportation, property, commissary, procurement, subsistence and financial operations, as well as in the overall business management of the Defense Department.

At least three of the more controversial recommendations would affect the entire military populace including dependents.

These changes involve the medical care program, travel regulations and the operation of commissaries and post exchanges. Steps urged by the Commission would:

- Eliminate free hospital medical care for wives and children of all Servicemen in the United States in favor of a contributory health insurance system for military families.

- Reduce the present six-cent travel allowance, place restrictions on household goods shipments and require military personnel to foot the bill when shipping their private automobiles to overseas duty stations.

- Increase commissary and PX prices, and curtail the operation of these stores.

In addition to benefits, allowances and many services which would be wiped out or curtailed by the Commission recommendations, hundreds of military facilities would be closed down. These include hospitals, dispensaries, the Navy's Fleet Logistics Air Wings, the USAF Air Materiel Command's LOGAIR operation, all bakeries, meat cutting plants, dry cleaning plants, most laundries, clothing plants, Naval shipyards, properties in the industrial reserves and others. Thousands of civilian employees would lose their jobs and thousands of Service personnel would be transferred to new duties.

The Commission wants the Pentagon to get rid of all commercial-type activities which compete in any way with private industry, and to make greater use of services offered by civilian firms.

The philosophy of broader civilian control over the military establishment also is emphasized throughout the many reports.

For instance, the Commission urges "more predominately civilian administration of transportation"; the appointment of civilian comptrollers in each of the Services to relieve Service chiefs of all fiscal responsibility; direct supervision by the Pentagon General Counsel over all legal services in the three departments; placement of supply and service activities under the "direct management control" of the civilian secretariat.

The top Pentagon civilian command would be re-shuffled to give four assistant secretaries broader "management" powers; three assistant secretaries would be eliminated, and a new civilian position would be created "to insure the establishment and maintenance of effective planning and review of military requirements."

Two top-level central agencies would be established to purchase all food and clothing for the Services. They would consolidate and have charge of all warehouses and depots for food and clothing. The food agency would set up a uniform ration and master menu for all three Services, and the clothing agency would standardize the clothing allowance and certain items of clothing.

Officers assigned to administrative type duties in a number of fields would be given greater assignment stability by the Commission. Their opportunities for career advancement also would be stepped up.

For example, military personnel assigned to property management activities would be given continuous service in their jobs for "considerable periods of time" and would be accorded rank and promotion opportunities "comparable to those in the combat military services."

Officers assigned to Research and Development work also would be given extended tours of duty "in order that they may become professionally adept." They would receive "the same preferment and promotion as if they were rotated in short-term service."

In the budgetary and accounting field the Commission found "a failure to recognize the need for career specialists." It said "rotation policies of such military personnel as are required must be changed if properly qualified military officers are to be available for use."

Intelligence officers also were recommended for better career opportunities and the Commission urged that intelligence chiefs of the three Services be promoted to the rank of Deputy Chief.

Legal departments in all of the Services would be established on "a basis of professional independence, sound promotion and adequate compensation." A Navy JAG Corps, similar to other Navy staff corps, but paralleling the Army JAGC and the AF JAG Department, also would be established.

In all, the Commission made nearly one hundred major recommendations affecting the Defense Department and suggested dozens of other minor changes.

The weighing and sifting task of the Coolidge survey group will be herculean.

Col. Timboe PubInfo Chief For Sixth Army Hdqrs.

Col. Arthur C. Timboe, USA, has been named Chief of the Sixth Army Information Section, it is announced by Gen. Robert N. Young, USA, Commander. He replaces Lt. Col. Stephen C. Monroe, USA, who is leaving for a temporary assignment in Washington, D. C.

Prior to entering active duty with his unit in February 1941, Colonel Timboe was affiliated for 15 years with the Devils Lake, N. D., Daily Journal as a sports and news writer and later as editor.

Sent to Korea in 1943, Col. Timboe was successively Public Information Officer of the UN Command Military Armistice Commission at Munsan-ni and Panmunjom and PIO of the Korean Communications Zone. He returned to the United States in April for assignment to Sixth Army Headquarters.

Colonel and Mrs. Timboe, the former Miss Catherine Baker of Loma, N. D., are presently living in Corte Madera, Calif., with their three children, Gay, Mary Frances and Arthur Richard.

Heads Equipment Division

Col. Mansfield W. Nelson, formerly Director of Operations, Bremerhaven Port of Embarkation, Germany, has recently been assigned Chief of the Equipment Division at the Brooklyn Army Base, it was announced by Brig. Gen. James Glore, Commanding General, New York Port of Embarkation. Col. Nelson replaces Lt. Col. Paul C. Plapp who left for new assignment.

"FORGIVENESS" ASKED FOR 12,000 EM

The Defense Department, citing the "serious morale factor" involved, has asked Congress to forgive overpayments made to 12,018 enlisted men of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard who signed up for continued service during the period from 16 July 1954 to 30 March 1955.

They have received overpayments of $3,485,752.

This resulted from a decision by the Comptroller General that persons who had reenlisted after 1 Oct. 1949 when the Career Compensation Act went into effect and who then reenlisted again after passage of the Re-Up Bonus Bill last July were signing up for a second reenlistment—not a first—under the new law.

The Defense Department said these men reenlisted "in good faith based upon uniform regulations of the Department of Defense. . . . It would be a serious morale factor to these individuals and their families to require them now to repay part of the bonus paid them at the time of their reenlistment."

There is little question that Congress will be sympathetic to the plight of these enlisted men and women. Only problem is that legislators are anxious to wind up action and go home.

Navy Eases Advance Pay Rule For Shifts, Permits Up To Three Months Assistance

The Navy has made it easier for officers and enlisted men ordered to new stations to draw advance pay.

A new regulation states that an officer or enlisted man with dependents can draw up to three months basic pay upon being shifted to a new home yard or home port.

In effect, the clarification by the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts means that any member of a unit or a ship's crew who has dependents is eligible for an advance in pay even though individual orders have not been issued. Before the change, contained in AlNav 48, a man could only draw on his pay if he presented individual official orders.

Now an advance may be made at any time after receipt of an official notice that a ship or a unit is to be shifted to a new home yard or home port. No payment, however, will be made after a ship or unit has been in its new location for 30 days. All advances are made after income tax withholdings are made, plus any indebtedness incurred by an individual from a previous advance.

Enlisted men must have at least six months obligated service remaining to be eligible for any advance in pay.

Colonel Felix S. Bambace, MC, USA, a key officer at the Medical Field Service School, has left Brooke Army Medical Center, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., for a new assignment. He has been serving as chief of the Office of Training Standards and as coordinator for Allied officer students at the School and will be now commander of the hospital and post surgeon at Camp Cooke, Lompoc, Calif.

AN INDIAN PICTOGRAPH illustrating the mission of the new Fairchild C-123B is presented to the crew from Ardmore AFB, Okla., which flew in the first operational C-123B. 1st Lt. Donal N. Newell, co-pilot, holds the pictograph. Looking on are Mr. Fred Beaver, Indian artist who drew the pictograph; Capt. Nelson L. Neil, pilot; a young Kiowa Indian girl dancer; Lt. Newell; and S/Sgt. David T. Evans, engineer (left to right).

309th TC Gp. Activated at Ardmore AFB With New C-123B Assault Transports

The 309th Troop Carrier Group, which ultimately will be composed of approximately 600 officers and airmen, was activated at Ardmore AFB, Okla., recently, simultaneously with the arrival of the Air Force's new combat assault aircraft, the Fairchild C-123B, which they will fly.

Impressive ceremonies, witnessed by a large crowd of civilian and military dignitaries and many local citizens, hailed the arrival of the new plane and the activation of the new group.

The 309th, upon activation, became a part of the 463d Troop Carrier Wing, Ardmore Air Force Base, commanded by Brig. Gen. Cecil H. Childre. The 463d is one of five wings in the Eighteenth Air Force, Tactical Air Command, assigned the job of aerially transporting men, materiel and equipment anywhere in the world under combat conditions.

Indians in native costume representing five different tribes welcomed the arrival of the new aircraft with a war dance of Plains Indians. Led by Mr. Robert Goombi, a full-blood Kiowa, Indians of the Kiowa, Comanche, Wichita, Creek and Kiowa-Apache tribes broke into their age-old dance around the plane.

The group of dignitaries proceeded to the plane immediately after the war dance to welcome the crew of the C-123B. Included in the group were Oklahoma Governor Raymond Gary; Maj. Gen. Dwight W. Hutchison, Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations, Tactical Air Command, who represented General O. P. Weyland, Commander of TAC; Maj. Gen. Chester E. McCarty, Commander of Eighteenth Air Force; Mr. W. L. Landers, Vice-President and General Manager, Aircraft Division of Fairchild Aircraft and Engine Corporation; and many other state and military officials.

Col. William C. Bentley, commander of the new 309th Troop Carrier Group, was accorded special honors.

An Indian name was given the new aircraft by Mr. Fred Beaver, Indian artist from Ardmore, Okla. He also drew an elaborate Indian pictograph which symbolized the mission of the plane. The name given to the plane was "Hulwe Conecv" (pronounced Hul-we Jo-nee-jah), a Creek word which means "one who carries through the air."

Capt. Nelson L. Neil, pilot of the new aircraft, accepted the name and pictograph on behalf of the 309th Troop Carrier Group.

Army Team Tops Record Of Marine Corps Marksmen

One Marine Corps and two Army teams broke National records to climax the final shooting of the 1955 Southeastern high power rifle matches held July 8-10, at Ft. Benning, Ga. Topping the previous Marine record of 980, Army Team No. 2 scored 984, with 108 V rings; Army Team No. 1, 981 with 113 V rings, and the Marine Corps Gold Team, 981 with 111 V rings.

Army Team No. 2 was led by Coach-Capt. John W. Kolb, assistant coach of the All-Army Team and recent winner of the All-Army rifle matches at Benning. Fires included Capt. Richard H. Conley, Third Army, who fired a 249 out of a possible 250, with 32 V rings; 1st Lt. Lawrence Takahashi, Ft. Riley, Kans.; SFC Lloyd G. Crow, Jr., Third Army, and M/Sgt. Oscar L. Gallman of West Point, N. Y., assistant coach of the All-Army team. The team match was tenth in the three day competition which was entered by 282 military contestants.

The last day's firing exhibition was a fitting climax for this year's matches. Except for match No. 2, every winning score equaled or bettered existing National records, according to Col. Perry D. Swindler, USA Ret., of Lakeland, Fla., official National Rifle Association referee. Colonel Swindler is founder of the Ft. Benning Rifle and Pistol Club, which sponsored the event.

The Army firers came out on top in most of the big events. Match No. 7, an aggregate of matches No. AQ to 5, gave 1st Lt. Thomas W. W. Atwood, US Army Europe, the open category. First place in the master class was taken by M/Sgt. Francis B. Conway of Benning.

The Wimbledon 20 shots at 1000 yards prone found the Army and Marines sharing top honors. M/Sgt. Francis E. Redfern, Third Army, scored 100 with 15 V rings with the free rifle. Marine Corps Pfc James R. Bowen, of Parris Island, S. C., took the service rifle class with 99 and 8 V rings. Throughout the firing Marines placed many men among the top 10 masters, the only category in which they were entered.

New records were set early. After Lieutenant Atwood scored 100 with 8 V rings in the first match to break the old record of 99 with 13 V rings, Marine Corps shooter, 1st Lt. Clifford G. Tyrone, of Camp Pendleton, Calif., topped him with 100 and 12 V rings in this year's special event for distinguished marksman credit.

ARMY LINEUP—Col. George H. McManus, Jr., Adjutant General First Army; Col. Frederick Streicher, First Army MPPO; Col. Earl J. Murphy, G-4, First Army; Col. Chester DeForest Silvers, Judge Advocate, First Army; and Col. Norton B. Wilson, Deputy G-3, First Army, do it up handsomely with sons of Army Colonels during the recent swearing-in ceremonies held in New York City. Three dads administered the oath to their sons, while the remaining boys were sworn in by a father appointed for the occasion. The boys are, L to R: Curtis W. Kirchhoff, son of Col. Arthur A. G. Kirchhoff, Chief of Staff the Engineer Center, Ft. Belvoir, Va.; Richard T. Willson, son of Col. Richard T. Willson, former deputy G-1, First Army; George H. McManus, III, Daniel H. Wilson; Peyton C. Cron, son of Col. Lucius N. Cron, G-2, First Army; Chester DeForest Silvers, and Benjamin F. Evans, III, son of Col. Benjamin F. Evans who is on duty with the Continental Army Command (CONARC) Ft. Monroe, Va. The boys after basic training at Ft. Dix, will attend West Point Preparatory School at Stewart AFB.

They Await Promotion To Temp. Colonel; Some Will Get New Rank In July

THE following officers, whose names are listed in Circular 624-35, have been selected for temporary promotion to colonel. About 150 will be promoted at the end of July. The remainder will be advanced as vacancies permit.

The Army has been able to make a sizable number of promotions to colonel because its strength in that rank has been considerably below that authorized in the Arends Act.

The tiny Typebox that holds big ideas for printing telegraphy

The new Model 28 Teletype Printer is so completely original in concept that it introduces many revolutionary ideas to the field of printing telegraphy. Perhaps the most ingenious of these is that you don't need a conventional typebasket and heavy carriage.

A featherweight carriage featuring a two-ounce Typebox replaces it in the Model 28. Here's how it works: a) the Typebox is moved to bring the selected character to the fixed printing position; b) the print hammer drives the type pallet against the ribbon and paper; c) after each stroke the Typebox is returned to its unoperated position below the printed line. Shift and un-shift are governed by the Typebox position. The platen remains stationary.

You can easily see the advantages: smooth, quiet operation at 60, 75 or 100 wpm; maintenance cut to a fraction; quick interchangeability of type faces (without tools) facilitates conversion to foreign languages, weather symbols, code characters, etc. Altogether, the Teletype 28—with its completely new Typebox—represents a giant stride forward in the art of printing telegraphy.

Promote Navy WO's

Almost 700 Navy warrant officers have been nominated for promotion by President Eisenhower.

The names, including 688 to W-4 and two to W-3, were sent to the Senate on 13 July and appear in the Congressional Record of that date.

NAVAL FORCES CUT—BUT NOT MISSIONS

Quantico, Va.

Admiral Robert B. Carney, USN, making his farewell appearance as Chief of Naval Operations at an annual Secretaries Conference, declared here on 16 July that Naval commitments have been continued at a higher level than was contemplated in setting the present force level.

The Navy now has about 667,000 officers and men, is scheduled to end the current fiscal year with 657,000.

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson said at a news conference on 17 June that the Formosa situation has required a greater deployment of ships in the Far East than had been contemplated.

Admiral Carney also told the conferees that the Navy is "deficient in some modern equipment for combatting enemy submarines." He added that "we are behind in minesweeping capability and harbor defense."

Reiterating statements he has made in speeches to civilian groups, the CNO remarked that the Soviets "are building up a significant naval strength which is already a threat to Allied naval supremacy." He said the "Soviets already have a measure of control over limited sea areas and they are training with vigor and high degree of sophistication."

Admiral Carney commented that "a few years ago the Allies could be assured of total control of the seas. Today that control is less than absolute."

Navy Officers & EM Get New Working Jacket & Cap; EM Get Improved Raincoat

The Navy has approved a new blue working jacket and cap for officers and enlisted men.

At the same time, Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas authorized the wear of a new style raincoat for enlisted men. The adoption of these new articles of uniform are among 18 changes now being incorporated into the Navy's uniform regulations. Details of the other changes were reported in THE JOURNAL of 9 April, page 934. The official listing is contained in BuPers Notice 1020, dated 6 July.

The decision to include the jacket and cap in the enlisted man's wardrobe follows requests from the fleet for a practical working uniform. Previously, EM had to wear the white hat—which soiled easily—and the pea-coat while performing maintenance duties. After investigation, the Navy decided that the washable fatigue-type jacket and cap would be just as suitable for officers. The new blue jacket and ski-type cap are expected to be available in October. The jacket will cost about $7.50 and the cap about 60 cents.

Both items of uniform are optional and are not authorized for leave or liberty. The jacket will be made of blue cotton, water and wind resistant, cloth. It will be single breasted, have a plain collar, and two pockets located on the side fronts. It will be tailored with a slide fastener and button closure, and be fitted with a fleece-type lining.

The peaked cap will have a loose crown and will be made of the same material as the jacket.

The Navy also revealed that the old-style raincoat will become obsolete in 1957. A new type has already begun to be issued to recruits. The new raincoat is made of cotton oxford cloth, impregnated to ward off water and resist wind. It is styled with a full belt rather than the half-belt on the old-type. Men in possession of old-style raincoats may continue to wear them until 1 July 57.

3 Generations of Military Tailoring

Tells New Marine Look To Conferees, "Objectives Clear," Says Gen. Shepherd

(One of the most detailed statements ever made on Marine Corps' atomic age doctrine was presented 16 July by General Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., USMC Commandant, to the Secretaries Conference, meeting at the Marine Corps School, Quantico, Va. Here is the complete text of General Shepherd's report as made available to newsmen attending the weekend sessions.)

General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Marine Corps Commandant, identified the Marine Corps role as the "segment in the vast military spectrum—the landing from the sea."

Our major interest lies, and our major efforts are exerted in this region, he said. The modern art of amphibious warfare had its genesis at the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, he said in terming the "locale" ideal for the discussion.

"It was here the doctrines were devised by which the allies were able to carry out the great amphibious campaigns of World War II," General Shepherd said.

"It is here, for the second time in little more than a generation that a new design for projecting our forces onto hostile shores has taken form. This new doctrine was conceived as our answer to the atomic threat in amphibious operations. It is presently being tested with considerable success by our Fleet Marine Forces. These complement our two major fleets enabling them to exploit fully the capabilities of sea power within and around the oceans which link us to Europe on the east and Asia on the west."

"However," General Shepherd continued, "their true combat readiness can be evaluated fully only if new developments in weapons are given adequate consideration," and on this there are "grounds for greater optimism."

"The ability of our fleets to extend their power ashore through air attack is superbly complemented by their ability to place landing forces ashore at times and places of our own choosing," he said.

"In the entire field of military tactics, only the amphibious operation received immediate consideration in connection with the new atomic weapons. And early speculation was confined to a defensive viewpoint. I believe this goes a long way to account for the idea, not yet fully dissipated, that amphibious warfare was outmoded."

"What was outmoded was not amphibious warfare, but the then current tactics of the amphibious operation. Success in World War II was never viewed by the Marine Corps as a reason for complacency during the years since the first atomic explosion ushered in the era of nuclear warfare."

"I am happy to report that efforts to find new answers have been fruitful. We have a new design for employment of landing forces—a design which forecasts a new order of offensive power in the amphibious operation."

"We have modified concepts of World War II in favor of a design for greater speed and flexibility."

"This speed and flexibility will be attained largely through the use of the helicopter to supplement, and finally supplant, the conventional means of transporting troops from ships at sea to a hostile shore. To this capability, there will be added the tremendous firepower of new weapons."

Preceded by extensive preparatory, possibly by nuclear weapons, to neutralize an enemy's ability to counterattack, the landing force of the future must be in fast transport to "keep station" with the fastest air craft carriers and to meet a need for greater dispersion, and to be able to unload rapidly while underway. The assault will be conducted by helicopter borne forces protected and supported by fighter and attack aircraft. General Shepherd said.

Key terrain at landing areas will be extended by tactical units using helicopters, teamed with fighter aircraft and all types of fire support. Helicopter patrols will bomb unoccupied areas and combat action will be fluid, General Shepherd said, pointing out that the advantages of such assault allow complete freedom of choice of landing area without regard to sea conditions, hydrography, coastal terrain or enemy defense.

General Shepherd cited other advantages: greater shock effect through speed and depth of initial penetration, increased chance of surprise, the landing of a combat formation in a key area without the crossing of beaches leading thereto, attack from the rear or flank as well as the front, and requiring an enemy to disperse widely to meet threat of attack.

Ashore, new design techniques will further exploit the elements of surprise, movement and economy of force achieved through use of helicopters and fast amphibious shipping.

New techniques can be made practical much earlier than is generally recognized, utilizing a fully suitable helicopter in adequate numbers, appropriate fast shipping, and an adequate arsenal of atomic weapons. "For more than a year special experimental organization has been developing and testing techniques for vertical lift operations, helicopter production has been accelerated, and our schools have incorporated new tactical concepts," General Shepherd said.

"New weapons are being incorporated as rapidly as they become available, the Navy has complemented our efforts by recognizing in its ship building program requirements for fast ships for helicopters and troops, and as an interim measure an escort carrier is being converted for this purpose. Some of these measures are costly, but in the long run initial costs will be offset by savings," the Marine Commandant continued.

"Our design is consistent with national policy to exploit technical advances to increase effectiveness of our forces, while reducing costs in manpower and dollars. We are making progress from concept to reality."

"At the same time, we have been careful not to lose sight of the importance of the individual, the most vital single element in our program. The fundamental virtues of integrity, loyalty and obedience which have marked Marines of the past will be of even greater significance in the future."

"Our objectives are clear—our program forward looking. The Fleet Marine Force will continue to be an effective instrument by which our command of the seas can be exploited through timely projection of offensive forces against a hostile shore." General Shepherd said.

Col. Lane Leaves HQMC; Col. Clark Heads Branch

Col. Henry C. Lane, USMC, Head, Aviation Logistics and Materiel Branch at Marine Corps Headquarters, has been succeeded by Col. Robert W. Clark, USMC, who reports from Cherry Point, N. C., where he was Commanding Officer, MWSG-27.

One of Colonel Lane's final duties at Headquarters was the submission of a report recommending that the Marine Corps replace all tents in use by its air arm with a new type of shelter—the Geodesic Dome (THE JOURNAL, 2 July, page 1306). As a result of his recommendations, approved by Lt. Gen. William O. Brice, USMC, Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps for Air, it is expected that all tents now in use by Marine Aviation will be phased out by June 1958.

Colonel Lane is now undergoing helicopter training at NAS, Pensacola, Fla. Upon completion of the course, he will report to the Commanding General, 1st MAW, for assignment.

In a new British factory, Sugg Solar will build the Mars for its various present applications—in airborne auxiliary generator sets, portable fire pumps, and ground power units for aircraft. Sugg Solar is licensed also to manufacture new versions of the Mars as they are developed.

The Mars is a remarkable engine. It weighs less than 100 lb, is smaller than a two-foot cube, and operates at a speed of 40,000 rpm on natural

U. S. Air Force

Red Air Arm Grows Says USAF Chief

(The following is the text of General Nathan F. Twining's presentation at the Secretaries Conference in Quantico, Va., as made public. Like the other briefings by Service chiefs, the Air Force Chief of Staff spoke behind closed doors.)

GENERAL Nathan F. Twining, C/S, USAF, addressed the civilian and military gathering of the Department of Defense at the annual Quantico Meeting now in session. He presented the Air Force's roles and capabilities on a global basis in contrast to the Area presentations by speakers from the other Services. He indicated that this broader approach was adopted "because the Air Force roles and capabilities cannot be presented adequately by confining the discussions to specific geographical areas. It has to be presented against a global background."

He went on to discuss the U. S. Air Force roles and capabilities with respect to national security policy and analyzed the Air Force's global capabilities to support national security policy. Indicating the tasks of the Air Force in this respect, he pointed out that the first of these tasks is to deter aggression.

He then evaluated the Soviet Long-Range Air Force capabilities in light of the recent revelations of Soviet multijet long-range aircraft and long-range heavy aircraft, and concluded "this concrete evidence of accelerated Soviet progress clearly determines a Soviet intent to develop an effective long-range air arm."

Next, he outlined U. S. requirements for the maintenance of a qualitatively superior air force, looking out into the future some 5 to 10 years.

In broad terms he retraced the progress the Air Force has made in the past year in developing this qualitatively superior Air Force in the expansion program toward the 137 wing goal. He pointed out, parenthetically that, "our volunteer observers are now manning 49 centers and 12,669 ground observer posts, but we need more volunteers."

From this global back-drop he discussed the strength, the roles, and capabilities of our Air Forces based overseas, principally in the Far East and in Europe. He emphasized the unity of air operations and showed how these overseas air forces fitted into an over-all global strategy designed to:

- a. Defend the U. S. against air attack,
- b. Gain and maintain air superiority and ultimate supremacy.
- c. Interdict enemy lines of communications,
- d. Control vital air areas, and
- e. Furnish combat and logistic support to the Army.

He discussed our air capabilities in opposing possible future peripheral actions, pointing out that these capabilities are unlimited save for the degree of restrictions imposed.

He pointed out that "our objective with regard to reserve and national guard forces is to make them combat ready so that they can be called upon to augment rapidly our active forces should the need arise. Right now we have all of our 51 wings activated. The Air National Guard has 72% of its officers and 80% of its enlisted personnel quotas filled. Our reserve units have 80% officer but only 40% of their enlisted quotas. It is expected that this situation will be greatly improved over the next 3 years as we are just now beginning to benefit from the enlistments from men who are fulfilling their 8 year military obligations by remaining active in the reserve program."

He related that the active personnel picture has also improved during this past year attributing this improvement to increased pay, re-enlistment bonuses, increased fringe benefits, and public recognition of our personnel problems.

He praised Mr. Talbott, Secretary of the Air Force, for his untiring efforts in making a career in the Air Force a more attractive and desirable vocation. He concluded that "we in the Air Force can offer this youth a multitude of career choices in our strategic, air defense, or tactical air forces, in our development programs or in our reserve organizations. Whatever field he may choose, will be one of interest, progress, and satisfaction. He can join in with his comrades-in-arms to fulfill a vital role in an Air Force that is dedicated to, designed for, and capable of, supporting our national policy. He will be joining an Air Force that is an effective military instrument in support of our national security policy and an Air Force that is today, and can be tomorrow, more than a match for Communist military power."

Gen. LeMay Tells Progress, Says "Much To Be Done"

Quantico, Va.

General Curtis E. LeMay, USAF, Commander-in-Chief of the Strategic Air Command, whose report on "career attractiveness" was a highlight of the first Secretaries Conference here in 1953, continued to stress this theme during the third annual meeting.

He told an audience of about 170 top military and civilian leaders that "much has been done" in the field of improving career attractiveness, but he reported that "much remains to be done."

Herewith is the text of the extract from General LeMay's closed-door briefing:

General Curtis E. LeMay, Commander-in-Chief, Strategic Air Command, made a brief presentation at the Quantico Conference pertaining to the overall capability of the Strategic Air Command in accomplishing his assigned task. In this respect, General LeMay stated that he considered the Strategic Air Command fully capable of inflicting decisive damage against an aggressor. Specifically, General LeMay stated "the aircraft and weapons supplied us by American technology and production are qualitatively superior." However, we have no reason to be complacent about this current consideration and we must make every effort to ensure that our research, development, and production capacity is directed toward ensuring that we maintain a qualitative superiority in aircraft and weapons at all times.

GENERAL LEMAY POINTED OUT one additional significant aspect of our qualitative superiority was in the field of personnel. General LeMay feels that the hard core of officers and airmen in the Strategic Air Command today are comparable to the finest military groups in history. It is imperative that we maintain this type of organization. Of particular concern to General LeMay is the continual improvement of fringe benefits and housing for his personnel. He recognizes that much has been done in this field but much remains to be done in order to improve the situation.

In summary, General LeMay clearly indicated that the capability of the Strategic Air Command is one that is increasing and one that will continue to increase with the proper emphasis on the development of new aircraft and weapons, and the provision of personnel considerations that will provide SAC with competent officers and airmen at all times.

18th AF Commander Praises All Army, Air Force & RCAF Units for Project Ice Cube

MAJ. Gen. Chester E. McCarty, commander of the 18th Air Force, with Headquarters at Greenville, S. C., has sent a strong commendatory telegram to all of the U. S. Air Force, U. S. Army, and Royal Canadian Air Force units responsible for the successful accomplishment of Project Ice Cube, the airlift of thousands of tons of tractors, construction equipment, and prefabricated buildings to ice strips hundreds of miles north of the Arctic Circle for the DEWline or distant early warning radar network from the Alaskan border to Baffinland.

The 18th Air Force had overall control of Project Ice Cube, the Air Force phase of the DEWline airlift, mounted mainly by 18th Air Force C-124 Globemasters, USAF's biggest transport aircraft. Canadian and American civilian airline aircraft, smaller in size, also airlifted a tremendous tonnage of DEWline supplies and materiel, working directly under the construction companies erecting the DEWline sites.

THIS WAS THE FIRST TIME in aviation history that big Douglas Globemasters have been repeatedly utilized for hazardous ice landings north of the Arctic Circle, many hundreds of such landings.

"You and each member of your Ice

Cube organization," General McCarty wired Col. Wade Hampton, commander of the 63d Troop Carrier Wing at Donaldson AFB, S. C., "including units and personnel attached, and those on loan from the Air Materiel Command, are commended for your outstanding accomplishments of a most difficult and important job under hazardous and trying circumstances. Your thoroughness of purpose and outstanding leadership have made this possible. Convey to each my sentiments above expressed, including the personnel from the Northeast Air Command and other commands who assisted you."

Colonel Hampton, who was mission commander of Project Ice Cube for the 18th Air Force, forwarded General McCarty's message to his own groups and to other commands which assisted him, with the following remarks of his own:

"I wish to add my sincere appreciation and congratulations for a fine job to all officers, airmen and civilians of the 63d Troop Carrier Wing, supporting commands and other organizations who were instrumental in the successful accomplishment of this mission."

General O. P. Weyland, commander of the Tactical Air Command, has described the DEWline airlift as the biggest Arctic project ever undertaken by the Air Force.

"Recent examples of the work being performed by our troop carrier units," he said, "are their support of Operation Big Haul in Alaska, and Project Ice Cube in Canada. Both of these operations are part of the DEWline, distant early warning network construction. In Big Haul, which was recently completed, more than 6600 tons of tractors, building supplies and other heavy construction equipment were flown into remote northern Alaskan sites by C-124 aircraft.

"A PARTICULARLY DRAMATIC OPERATION is involved in Ice Cube, which is now under way in the Arctic regions of Central and Eastern Canada, also in support of the DEWline project. Here C-119 type aircraft parachute 16,000 pound tractors, which are used to fashion landing strips out of ice and snow. This makes it possible for C-124 Globemasters with gross weights of 155,000 pounds, to land supplies and equipment to build detection sites in areas which are otherwise inaccessible. Actually, this represents the biggest Arctic project ever undertaken by the Air Force.

"It is a constant race against time for soon the ice and snow will be melting, and the airlift must be completed before then, or portions of the project must be delayed.

"Just to give you an idea of what this means, when the airlift is finished, the Eighteenth Air Force will have flown approximately 15,000 tons of equipment and materials into these remote polar areas for the construction of important detection sites."

THE 18th AIR FORCE assigned and attached units specifically commended, in addition to the 63d Troop Carrier Wing, included the 63d and 61st Troop Carrier Groups, both of Donaldson Air Force Base, S. C., which furnished most of the C-124 Globemasters which flew the DEWline heavy cargo; support groups and squadrons at Donaldson AFB, which supplied and maintained the 1st Aerial Port Operations Squadron of Donaldson AFB, S. C., which loaded and tied down most of the cargo airlifted to the icestrip sites and (Please turn to Page 1419)

Revisions In AF Weather Career Field Scheduled

Major revisions in the USAF weather career field have been approved and will become effective in November.

Outlined in detail in AF Manual 35-1, the major changes include increased rank opportunities for weather observers—up to warrant officer, provided grade and space authorizations are available and the combining of existing career ladders into three job routes.

The three career ladders, observing, forecasting and equipment, will channel specialists and technicians toward superintendent levels in the various phases of weather station operation. Although Air Force headquarters has approved most of the Air Weather Service-proposed program, it is still studying certain facets of it, such as civilian institution training for forecasting personnel and the development of new TO's to reflect the career change.

Reserve Jet Pilot Sets Flight Record

1st Lt. Glenn R. Stremke, of the 438th Fighter-Bomber Wing, is believed to have set a record for flying time by a Reservist jet pilot.

Lieutenant Stremke was credited with 329 hours in the air during the past fiscal year, three and a half times the Air Force requirement of 90 hours for regular and reserve pilots. The Wisconsin unit's second highest reservist, Capt. Richard B. Bosley, flew 171 hours.

Quantico III—Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson, an ebullient host despite a July Fourth aquaplane tumble that cost him four cracked ribs, can count the third annual Secretaries Conference at Quantico, Va., an outstanding success. Though prevented from participation in the recreation program because of his prior antics, the Secretary could enjoy the panoramic scene from lakes to links at the Marine Corps Schools as top civilian and military officials got to know one another better. That is particularly important in the current Defense Department structure, where each year can be counted on to see a formidable turnover.

Thus, for example, Quantico III had on hand a Deputy Defense Secretary-designate, Mr. Reuben Robertson; an Army Secretary-designate, Governor Wilber M. Brucker; a new Army Chief of Staff, General Maxwell D. Taylor; and a CNO-designate, RAdm. Arleigh A. Burke, who was given special authority at Mr. Wilson's order to wear four-star rank over the weekend.

But even more important than the good fellowship of the annual Quantico weekend is the fact that this setting gives military commanders an incomparable opportunity to present to civilian chiefs of the Defense Department and other branches of Government the capabilities and needs of the respective Services. The presence this year of overseas commanders made this aspect of the Secretaries Conference even more effective than in past years.

Though the 1955 emphasis on "career attractiveness" matters was less than at Quantico I and Quantico II—doubtless a reflection of the considerable progress made in this field—the military commanders were careful not to lose the opportunity of such a notable audience to stress the urgency of continued action to assure attraction and retention of top notch personnel in the Armed Forces. Admiral Arthur Radford, USN, Chairman of the JCS, spoke strongly to this point. Significantly, Mr. Wilson, at a summation meeting with newsmen, echoed this plea of his military leaders.

The Secretary said he "always gets a little peeved when someone takes a crack at what they call 'the brass' in general terms . . . We all ought to be thankful for the kind of people that have come to the front in the past wars and the kind of people that are serving right now."

Illuminating the essential quality of Quantico III, the Secretary added: "As a matter of fact, that is one of the greatest goods we get out of a session like this one. We look each other over and decide 'Well, after all, it's quite a crowd, a good crowd of people, and we can reasonably meet any kind of a situation or emergency that we have to.'"

The Nation can only applaud a conference which helps develop and strengthen that kind of teamwork.

An Unfortunate Delay. Emphatic statements by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson early this year concerning the need for expanding the officer strengths of the Regular Army and Regular Air Force raised hopes that the Pentagon would speed a legislative request to Congress. It appeared that Mr. Wilson had received a go-ahead from the White House and that the Budget Bureau would give its required O.K. in fast order. This has not been the case. The legislative proposal is still at the Budget Bureau; as a consequence, barring an unforeseen last-minute rush, the augmentation bill will not be considered by this session of Congress.

A bill to give the Navy and Marine Corps permanent authority for integrating Reserve officers into the Regular Establishment has been cleared by the House. These Services have roughly the 50 per cent ratio of Regular officers, which Mr. Wilson says is desirable.

On the other hand, the Army has only about 20 per cent Regular officers; the Air Force percentage is less than that. The Army several years ago sought to add 6,000 Regular officers to its present ceiling of 30,600, but the Budget Bureau, after long delay, cut this to 4,080. A bill to authorize such an increase has been sidetracked at the Capitol, pending the anticipated arrival of an all-Service integration measure.

Defense Secretary Wilson stressed during earlier Congressional testimony the importance of increasing the Regular strength of the Army and Air Force on two counts. He said first that such action would increase manpower stability and permit more efficient assignment of personnel. Mr. Wilson also pointed out that opportunity should be provided for thousands of Reservists on active duty to compete for Regular appointments, since they are, in effect, career officers.

It is to be hoped that the Defense Department and the Budget Bureau quickly complete coordination of the Regular officer legislation, so that a bill can be introduced before the end of this session and made a priority item for 1956 Congressional action.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—In almost identical statements issued by General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower and Field Marshal Bernard L. Montgomery on 14 July, personnel of the American, British and Canadian occupation forces in Germany were advised of the lifting of the ban on fraternization. Up to that time they could speak only to children. The penalty for violation was a $65 fine.

50 Years Ago—The Arctic exploring ship Roosevelt left New York 16 July on her journey for the North amid a salute of whistles from harbor craft.

90 Years Ago—When the history of the great American Civil War has been written, the people will recognize what is a truism among military men, that in no respect are the operations of the Quartermaster's Department second in importance to those even of the ablest generals in the field. The history of that department is in the truest sense the history of every campaign. As the office of the soldier is to cripple the resources and paralyze the strength of his enemy, so the office of the Quartermaster is to preserve and husband the powers of the soldier.

Medical Officer Staffing Ratios

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

From time to time we have read both in local newspapers and service publications of the medical officer staffing ratio of 3 physicians per 1,000 troops and how unfavorably this figure in the military establishment compares with the figure for civilian doctors per 1,000 civilian population. What has never been brought out in any publication medium is the inequality of such a comparison.

First of all the military medical officer staffing ratio includes all medical officers in an area, command or theater, including those involved in essential administrative duties, hospital duties, and preventive medicine duties. The denominator of that ratio is the number of military personnel actually on duty in the area.

The civilian figure includes only those doctors who are engaged in private medical or surgical practice in a given area. It does not include full time administrative medical personnel, public health personnel or full time hospital staff personnel. Therein lies the inequality of the comparison for the military medical services must necessarily include as an integral part of the medical service medical officers who are engaged in fields of activity which are not included in the corresponding civilian figures.

Consider also the situation in certain overseas areas or isolated areas of the United States where dependents are stationed. In such circumstances the local civilian medical personnel are either overworked without the dependents, or practice a quality of medical care that is in many foreign areas 50 to 100 years behind the level of medical practice in the United States. What then is the proper denominator of the medical officer staffing ratio? Is it only the military personnel on active duty, or these persons plus all dependents?

It seems wise to consider these factors in any comparison of military and civilian physician to population ratios, and yet to the best of my knowledge such additional information is never given in any published comparison that I have read.

REGULAR ARMY MEDICAL OFFICER

Marine Sergeant's Viewpoint

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In the 9 July issue of THE JOURNAL, information was requested from the JOURNAL's readers regarding local conditions of dependents' dental and medical care.

We are stationed in Little Rock, Ark. and the situation is indeed very bad. All branches of the service are well represented in this area, with some 95% having dependents. The situation is the same for all hands and here it is briefly:

There are NO medical facilities available in the immediate area for dependents and except in dire emergencies for service personnel.

Since the closing of the Army-Navy Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., located some 60 miles from Little Rock, the only other sources available are the Naval Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., and the Army Field Hospital at Camp Chaffee, Ark., both over 150 miles from this station.

It is understood that the hospital at Hot Springs will reopen sometime in the near future, but even so, this still represents an unnecessary distance to travel, especially in maternity cases and in dental and minor cases. The going price in this area for delivery and hospitalization, in regards to maternity cases, runs well over $300, so it's easy to see how this affects all pay grades, and especially those in the lower brackets.

It would seem very logical that the armed forces would make the local VA Hospital available to service personnel and their dependents. If a man has to go to the Army-Navy Hospital in Hot Springs, it necessitates the absence from his duties for at least one-half day and sometimes more, even if it is a minor sickness or dental trouble. It seems as though this situation could be alleviated very easily, and at the same time not actually be of more expense to the Government, but less.

General Taylor States His Views On Army Role-Capability To Chiefs At Quantico

General Maxwell D. Taylor, sworn in as Army Chief of Staff on 1 July, presented to the Secretaries' Conference at Quantico, Va., on 16 July his ideas regarding the role and capability of the Army around the world. He stressed the need for "versatility and flexibility in the arsenal of weapons."

The prospects are that General Taylor's top-level, closed-door address at Quantico, before an audience including Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson and Deputy Defense Secretary designate Reuben Robertson, will form the basis for many future addresses and statements by Army spokesmen. Here is the complete text of the Chief of Staff's remarks, as made available to newsmen at Quantico:

THE United States must develop and maintain the military capability necessary to prevent the outbreak of general war and to deter or defeat local wars, since the latter if not quickly checked may lead to the general war which we seek to avoid. This capability must include:

a. Ready forces, which, with our allies can deter or, if the deterrent fails, can punish local aggression without broadening the hostilities into total war. These forces must be versatile, must be suitably deployed, must be highly mobile, and must possess an integrated atomic capability, if they are to respond with the speed and forcefulness appropriate to the needs of each situation.

b. Properly proportioned forces to deter general war, and to defeat the enemy if the deterrent fails.

THE ROLE OF THE ARMY

The Army is an essential part of America's deterrent forces. Its deployment in overseas areas is a declaration of national intent which encourages our allies and gives warning to potential aggressors. It is essential as a bulwark against aggression, large or small.

In the event of general war, the Army is a decisive instrument in the attainment of a victory compatible with post-war national objectives. It is a force which has the strategic and tactical flexibility, and the versatility, required to gain control of the resources derived from the soil of the enemy. It can proportion its blows to fit the case—from the force of the M.P.'s truncheon to the kilotons of atomic weapons. It can temper its destructive power to the aims and needs of the post-war peace.

We should not lose sight of the fact that America's potential enemies are land powers. Communist bloc forces are so deployed that, even if the Communist homelands were devastated, the impact on the armed forces of the bloc probably would not be felt for a considerable time. If, during that time, Communist bloc forces were occupying the land of friendly or potentially friendly countries, ultimate victory would be of comparatively little consequence to the free world. This bleak possibility makes it abundantly clear that the enemy's ground forces must be defeated as close to the Communist periphery as it is possible to do so. America must, therefore, develop its own armed strength, along with that of its allies, so that the nation can defeat the enemy's initial aggressive moves, including his advances on the ground. To provide this indispensable American contribution is an important part of the role of the Army.

The Army's role must be considered in the light of both deterrent and winning strengths. The deterrent strength is that of the active Army in being. The winning strength includes both the active Army and those reserves of men and materiel which become available upon mobilization.

IDEAL ACTIVE ARMY

The ideal active Army would include forces that would be readily available to carry out separately any of our various missions, such as a ready force to meet our NATO force goals and a ready force to resist local aggression elsewhere. This strength would permit the Army the flexibility required to meet successfully aggression in any of its various forms. Recognizing, however, that this ideal is exceedingly difficult to attain, the Army is intent upon doing its best to approximate the ideal within the available means.

MODERNIZATION OF THE ARMY

Preparation of modern Army forces receives the unremitting attention of our Army planners. They are bent on exploiting realistically the new weapons, devices, materials, and equipment developed by science and industry. They are evaluating these elements with respect to their wartime application, and are developing and testing the necessary doctrines and organizations for their employment. An army without atomic weapons on the battlefield of the future will be more helpless than the French Knights at Crecy before the English cannon. In estimating the nature of future combat, we in the Army consider four significant factors to be overriding: Superior firepower, greater mobility, reliable communications, and flexible logistics systems.

MAGGS, MISSIONS AND MUTUAL DEFENSE ASSISTANCE

The importance of the international role the U. S. Army is playing cannot be presented solely in terms of the U. S. forces which are deployed abroad. We are actively engaged in helping other nations to develop their own defenses. If we are to stop local aggressions, local indigenous forces must provide the first line of resistance. To this end, we are maintaining or participating in a world-encircling system of Military Assistance Advisory Groups and Training Missions.

RESERVE FORCES

As you know, expanded Army forces to permit later operations in a general war will have to come from our reserve forces and from general mobilization.

After D-Day, our reserve forces must be capable of accomplishing four important tasks: First, they must provide certain combat and support units immediately to reinforce our active forces. Second, they must provide antiaircraft units to augment our active units. Third, they must provide forces to expand our mobilization and training base in order to permit the rapid expansion of the Army. And, fourth, they must provide a large pool of qualified individuals needed in the expansion of our active forces and to provide early loss replacements.

The most pressing problem confronting our reserve forces is the shortage of trained, participating enlisted men. Examination and study of this problem in all its aspects, in the light of various proposed solutions, have led to the conclusion that fully manned, adequately trained, reserve forces, of the strength required to meet mobilization and deployment schedules, cannot be achieved or maintained under the present voluntary participation basis. The solution to the manpower problem lies in legislative action to provide a sound and equitable system for the compulsory basic training and active participation of non-veterans, and mandatory assignment and active participation of obligated veterans, backed up by realistically enforceable measures.

CONCLUSION

In concluding this rapid scan of the Army's horizon I must emphasize my feeling of the need for versatility and flexibility in the arsenal of weapons which constitutes our means for national security. If we are to assure that the disastrous big war never occurs, we must have the means to deter or to win the small wars. If we fail to avert the big war, we must win it through the application of a flexible military strategy integrating political and economic considerations, freed of any preconceived conception of a single, predestined course of events. Such a strategy requires the participation of an Army with versatility to cope with any form of aggression. Such an Army requires the knowledge, training and resources to apply military force of any intensity at any time and place for the duration required for victory. This is the Army which we build.

Medical Officer's Comment

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Re "Tell the Facts" (9 July 1955) on family medical care, it brought tears to the eyes and a lump in the throat, but it told few facts, and, of these, one, at least, was untrue. I have treated dependents in the Services for two years as a "Reserve officer."

First, the present system of free medical care, given by doctors in uniform, curtailed though it may be, gives service families very adequate protection by any standards. Its faults, however, are many, and are very different from those you suggest.

Under the system now in use, family medical care is not equitably distributed. The large posts and those in metropolitan areas give, in general, much more service than the small or remotely situated ones. This is unfair to the recipients. The present system also involves the drafting of 65 doctors out of every 100 to provide this service. Since it is free, this medical care depreciates in the mind of the patron, and it is widely abused. The "diversified experience" that "Reserve doctors want," in the words of your editorial, is, again, something other than what you have in mind. To a doctor, it is indeed an awe-inspiring experience to watch service dependents in large numbers diagnose their own illnesses, and demand specific remedies and tests before they have even mentioned their symptoms. If balked, in form of treatment or in manner, there is little hesitancy on the part of some to nail the service doctor with a letter of complaint.

The essence of the medical relationship is one of trust and respect, and this can only flourish where there is free choice of doctor by patient and vice versa. Where large numbers of people are "forced"—as in the present case, by the free-ness of the commodity—to go to one or several doctors, and those doctors must take care of all comers, the good medical relationship can only exist inconsistently and more or less by accident.

The remedy? Medical insurance for service families, or a medical allowance for each soldier, seaman, airman, etc., as he is now allowed subsistence or housing. The Hoover Commission has already suggested the former, and the whisper that a service man might pay a share of the insurance has brought forth howls of anguish. I believe these are unjustified howls. I believe that either of these plans would remedy many of the faults so apparent in the present system. I think it would, among other things, teach service mothers and fathers to be much more thoughtful and self-reliant. They are, as a group, seriously lacking in these values as compared with their counterparts in civilian life.

I believe that medical care for dependents is justified for the morale reasons you outline. But I believe that the present plan of such care contributes to the demoralization of patient and doctor alike, and that it should be given a long, cold look—a look which may well disregard both sentimentality and politics.

This is offered as "help (from) our readers" and as an antidote to a mild overdose of eyewash.

CAPTAIN, MC

Retirement's Problems

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I read with interest a recent letter from a Capt. AUS Retired.

My husband is retiring after 26 years. We cannot afford another day in the Army. I am looking to the future with some degree of panic. The day he retires our insurance and Survivor Benefits stop. What if he should die?

During these years with the Army we have made at least 14 major moves, not counting the ones from temporary quarters, with four overseas tours. Anyone in the Army knows how expensive these moves are. The periods of separation, the maintaining of two places for up to 9 months, living in tourist courts until suitable quarters can be found, out-lay for household goods each time and wear and tear on furniture. Each move takes the money you have saved while at a station.

Now we must start insurance, expensive at his age, start paying on a home which most civilians our age have almost or completely paid for, try to save for emergencies and hope our car will last a while longer. Thank goodness we only have one child to put through high school and educate.

Don't misunderstand me. I appreciate the experiences our life in the Army has given us and all the benefits, but it came as a shock when I realized we had no security built up after all these years. My daughter has received a "liberal education" through travel but that won't feed us should my husband be taken from us.

A Sgt's Report on Med. Care

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

With reference to your article on page 1342, of the 9 July 1955 issue, I submit the following:

I am a Sergeant (E-5) in the Regular Army, presently on duty with the USAR Advisor Group in Chattanooga, Tenn. I have a wife and two children, expecting a third in October. To date, since being assigned to this duty on 7 September 1954 I have incurred medical expenses of approximately $150. At the present time I have to concern myself (I do not worry) with where the money is coming from to pay the additional expense I will have to pay when my wife has to go to the hospital for delivery in October.

There are four other enlisted men in my organization, three of whom are married and from discussions with them I find that my expenses have been less than theirs. We are all behind your efforts on our behalf and I am urging them to write and state their cases individually.

C & CSC Honors

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In your issue of July 2, 1955, you wrote, in connection with your article on the 1954-1955 class at the Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth, "Not since the class of 1927 was graduated from the College has any announcement been made of honor graduates." May I suggest that you look up the graduation of the class of 1950-1951?

I could not be sure about other years, but in 1951 the top ten men in the class were called up for special recognition—I know—because my husband was one of them.

Dislikes Uniforms

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The newly approved AF Summer uniform really reeks of "Limey" influence. First we copy the RAF uniform, now we have our "fly boys" in shorts. As yet, no work uniform. It's a far cry from the old wrapped puttees and choke collars of the 20's, but still it was original and American and looked military. All we really need now is pink polka dots on that blue tie and we will really have an Air Force. Let's carry our hanky in our sleeve and really do it up brown.

AN OLD USAF TIMM

MEMO For Journal Readers

NOTWITHSTANDING COMPETITION from SecDef Wilson's four cracked ribs as a result of an aquaplaning mishap, the Army stole the show during the third annual Secretaries Conference at the Marine Corps Schools. New CofS Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor won prominent press attention with extracts from two closed-door briefings—one on the Far East, and the other a general report on Army roles and missions. THE ARMY'S DECISION to make available relatively detailed notes on Gen. Taylor's briefings gave newsmen an opportunity to develop lengthy stories. It was significant that following release of Gen. Taylor's second presentation—published in this issue—the NAVY DECIDED to issue a supplementary report on Adm. Carney's address.

GEN. TAYLOR'S COMMENTS on the Army were contrasted by many at Quantico with the less conciliatory tenor of Gen. Ridgway's farewell report to SecDef Wilson. There seems little doubt that the new CofS will seek increasingly to state the Army's case in positive terms—as for example his appeal for "integrated atomic capability." It's no secret at the Pentagon that Gen. Ridgway was getting nowhere with SecDef Wilson towards the end of his career in arguing against Army cuts. Gen. Taylor, more resilient, may win numbers with a softer approach, though curiously it will probably be a more positive technique. NOT TO BE OVERLOOKED is a big advantage the new CofS will have; he will be working under an Army Secretary, who is politically acute, and who will not likely become involved in seemingly endless skirmishing with Capitol Hill, as was the situation with Sec'y. Stevens and Senator McCarthy.

IN THE ARMY, though there was considerable disappointment over the wavering and indecision that marked the Sec'y. Stevens-Senator McCarthy ruckus, there is also a widespread recognition that it was Mr. Stevens who played a key role in putting the skids under the Senator's influence by standing up to him in the case of Brig. Gen. Zwicker, despite the lack of firm support from his superiors, Mr. Wilson and the President.

RANK WITHOUT PAY was what CNO-designate RAdm. Arleigh A. Burke, USN, received during the Quantico Conference. At the direction of SecDef Wilson, the Navy cut orders authorizing him to wear four stars during the weekend work-and-play sessions. THE SENATE CONFIRMED him for that rank as successor to Adm. Carney next month. Pentagon fiscal authorities said the DOUBLED STARS for Adm. Burke would not be reflected in his pay statement.

A KITCHEN POLICE SQUABBLE could develop in NATO. Air Force tables of organization provide funds for K.P. help; the Army lacks such a pleasant arrangement. Consequently, airmen in Germany escape K.P.; soldiers, however, either must pull K.P. or pay from their own pockets—normally about $3 per month—to hire indigenous messhall help. It's a case of culinary de-unification.

THERE WON'T BE FANFARE, such as Navy Sec'y. Thomas' instructions to the recently adjourned Flag Selection Board, but Army officers anticipate that forthcoming general officer "makes" will show an increased emphasis on youth. During Gen. Ridgway's tenure as CofS, there was more EMPHASIS ON SENIORITY. Gen. Taylor is said to be more inclined to reach down the lists to push the advancement of outstanding officers than was his predecessor. Meantime, however, the CofS' hands have been somewhat tied as to immediate general officer reassignments because of the release, just before he took over, of a list of 80 colonels and brigadier generals recommended for higher rank.

BEARDING THE LION, SecDef Wilson did not hesitate at the Quantico, Va., Marine Corps Schools center, to report last weekend that the Leathernecks would wind up the current fiscal year closer to the 193,000 men he and the President recommended than the 215,000 strength voted by Congress. But ALL WAS FORGIVEN; the Marines baked the Secretary a huge birthday cake (he was 65 on 18 July), and he closed a final meeting with newsmen by agreeing that the Marines had done a first rate job with arranging the Conference. "That is one reason the Marines are a great outfit," said the Secretary. "Whatever they do, they do completely and well."

THERE'LL BE CONTINUED TUMULT from some Members of Congress about impounding Marine Corps funds. However, there will hardly be mention of the fact that the Air Force probably will miss its stated FY '56 manpower goal of 975,000 by at least the 22,000 Marines involved in the current hassle. In recent years, the Services frequently have closed out a fiscal year with manpower deficiencies running into the thousands, compared with money voted by Congress. IN SUCH A SET-UP, where the Capitol votes more funds for defense than the White House permits to be spent, there's a source of volatile political friction.

DR. THOMAS FRANCIS, JR., of the University of Michigan School of Public Health who played a key role in the Salk Vaccine tests—he supervised the evaluation work—has been named to the Armed Forces Epidemiological Board. Research work sponsored by the AFEB paved the way for Dr. Salk's discovery, according to military medical officials.

THE SERVICES HAVE MUCH to gain—little to lose—by SecDef Wilson's action in naming former Asst. SecDef Charles Coolidge (he served under SecDef Lovett) to head a special Task Force which will study the Hoover Commission recommendations. Mr. Wilson believes the job should take about 6 months. THERE'S NO DOUBT Mr. Coolidge will recommend adoption of some Hoover Commission proposals. On the other hand, it can be expected he will give DETAILED REASONS why other recommendations should not be adopted. For example, Mr. Coolidge surely will assemble a strong case for continuation of FREE FAMILY CARE in the U. S. Arguments he and his associates compile for Mr. Wilson will provide strong ammunition on Capitol Hill next year. It would have been foolish for the DoD to have done anything but name a top-flight group to analyze the work of the Hoover Commission.

NEWSMEN AT QUANTICO were somewhat surprised when SecDef Wilson advised them there were no new Air Force plans for speeding production of the F-101 and F-104. AF Sec'y Talbott had advised the Senate Appropriations Committee by letter (The Journal, 25 June) that such a plan had been proposed and that extra money might be necessary to do the job.

ARMY COMMANDERS have been told anew to work as closely as possible with civilian traffic officials to cut down on automobile fatalities. Gen. Taylor, pointing to 477 soldier deaths in private autos during 1954, says traffic safety is of "paramount importance" to the Army. Taylor's message on safety was written in brisk, straightforward language, avoiding usual military jargon. He said progress is being made "but the problem is FAR FROM LICKED;" commented that the Army and civilian authorities are on a "two-way street" in working together.

HERCULES

This is the C-130 Hercules, a new Air Force combat cargo plane now in production at Government Aircraft Plant No. 6 (GAP-6) in Marietta, Georgia.

You're going to hear a lot about this plane. The Hercules was designed to function in the new atomic era as a highly mobile, high-speed transport, able to rush men and materiel to vital areas at less cost.

The C-130 is the result of a new Air Force-Lockheed concept of tactical mobility. It was engineered specifically to solve problems of loading, unloading, on-board handling, airport limitations and operating costs.

The low fuselage floor, 41 inches off the ground, provides truck-bed loading, while the adjustable tail ramp also permits vehicles to drive directly aboard. And the unique landing gear, combined with the C-130's tremendous power, makes possible short takeoffs and landings even on improvised runways.

Developed for the Tactical Air Command, the Hercules will also drop paratroops and evacuate wounded from forward areas. And its amazingly low operating cost promises greater economy in future peacetime air freight.

AER 49er Party

■ OAKLAND ARMY BASE, CALIF. Depicting a western theme, a 49er party was held at the Officers' Open Mess recently to raise funds for the Army Emergency Relief Fund. The sum of $446.60 was cleared with over 100 officers and wives attending. An additional $500 was raised by the Women's Club of the Oakland Army Base through raffle sales and other activities.

With Lt. Col. Charles L. Diamond, Post Chaplain, acting as master of ceremonies, an evening of fun began. Attired as "Diamond Lil," Mrs. Max W. Hazlehurst was very effective in her interpretation of that rustic character. Mrs. Harvey L. Cranfill, in charge of the can can show, looked lovely in her western costume. Being very funny portraying a foreigner playing the piccolo was Capt. John Reese of the Army Reserve Center, OAB.

Swinging doors and square dancing to the tune of the hillbilly music played by Dallas Phillips and his westerners added color to the atmosphere of that "fighting West."

■ SIDI SLIMANE AFB, FRENCH MOROCCO. Mrs. Charles B. Dougher, who is leaving North Africa soon, and Mrs. Joseph J. Nazzaro, who has recently arrived, were honored at a tea given by the Officers' Wives' Club.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Charles B. Dougher and their three daughters leave for Hunter AFB, Ga., where General Dougher will assume command of the 38th Air Division. Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Joseph J. Nazzaro and their two daughters arrived at Sidi Slimane on 18 June. Gen. Nazzaro was commander of the 38th Air Division at Hunter AFB, and replaces Gen. Aid Missions' Work

■ PINE BLUFF ARSENAL, ARK. The Ladies' Club of the Officers Open Mess presented Father Kempinski of St. Raphael's

Mission with a check for $200.00 with the promise of more to follow. This check represents proceeds to date for the sale of a cook book entitled "Top Secret" compiled by the women of the Arsenal.

Mrs. Robert W. Breaks, Honorary Chairman, will depart this post for Washington, D. C. where her husband, Col. Robert W. Breaks is assigned as a student at the National War College. The remainder of the committee was composed of Mrs. Larry Forkhamer, Chairman, Mrs. Ivan Cooper, Mrs. William Hadaway, Mrs. Russell James and Mrs. Bruce Spencer, Jr. Other members of the club helped assemble the books and contributed their favorite recipes.

Father Kempinski, who is Pine Bluff Arsenal Auxiliary Chaplain, is a German World War I veteran and winner of the Iron Cross for gallantry in action against the British in 1917. On the day he won the Iron Cross he vowed if he survived the ordeal of combat he would build a shrine in honor of Our Lady of Fatima. He came to the United States in 1923 and became a priest in 1926. He was assigned to Pine Bluff in 1939. The last four years he has been pastor of St. Raphael's Mission.

When the mission school was closed some time ago, although a city dweller, Father Kempinski turned his hand to farming. Now on over 600 acres of land under the Father's supervision some 50 poverty stricken people are given an opportunity to help themselves. Each family is given a parcel of land and allowed to plant crops that will bring them revenue.

Another major part of the mission is the shrine, built by Father Kempinski to fulfill his promise made that day in 1917. The Priest has erected a shrine to all American war dead who died for our country from that day in 1917.

LeMay Greets MacDill Wives

■ MacDILL AFB, FLA. Ten MacDill Dependents' Assistance volunteers attended a conference recently at SAC headquarters, Offutt AFB, Nebraska. The group was welcomed by Mrs. Curtis E. Led by Mrs. Kenneth O. Sanborn, wife of MacDill's Sixth Air Division commander, the group included Mesdames E. C. McAnnelly, D/A coordinator; P. H. Humphry, assistant coordinator; C. B. Tyler, L. L. Dunning, F. M. Stone, J. B. Fields, R. S. Ackerly, R. J. Scimio, and J. P. Hyland. Lt. Willard A. McCoy, MacDill D/A officer also attended the meeting.

Farewell to Mrs. Deagle

■ FT. STORY, VA. Officers' wives at this Cape Henry post feted the honorary president of their club, Mrs. Edwin A. Deagle, with a farewell party in the Colonial Room of the Officers Mess.

Mrs. Deagle is leaving 1 Aug. for Ft. Hamilton, N. Y. Her husband, Col. Edwin A. Deagle, who has been post commander for the past 11 months, will assume new duties as Comptroller at Brooklyn Army Base.

A large, handsome cake, appropriately inscribed with icing, greeted Mrs. Deagle as guest of honor at the afternoon affair. No effort has been spared by Mrs. Alfred R. Campbell, in charge of arrangements for the party, to make it a festive success.

Col. Power to 5th Army

Col. George W. Power, USA, executive officer of 2d Division Artillery, will depart Ft. Lewis, Wash., late this month for a new assignment at Fifth Army Headquarters in Chicago, Ill.

Maj. Gen. Miley Joins Brokerage Firm, Other Retired Officers Keep Selves Busy

Maj. Gen. William M. Miley, USA, Chief of Staff of the Continental Army Command, who retires 31 July after more than 37 years' service, has accepted a position with the brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Beane.

General Miley is known throughout the Army for his pioneering work in airborne warfare. He was an active parachutist on jump status from 1940 until 1952 when he became Commanding General of U. S. Army forces in Alaska.

General Miley has two sons, both qualified parachutists. The older son, Maj. William M. Miley, jr., USA, is an instructor in the Infantry School at Ft. Benning, Ga. The younger son, Capt. John D. Miley, USA-Ret., is employed by the Continental Can Company after being retired for physical disability as a result of wounds received in Korea.

COL. KENNETH W. TREACY, USA, who has served as Professor of Military Science and Tactics at the University of Utah for the past four years has just returned to Ft. Douglas from Letterman General Hospital, San Francisco, where he underwent treatment for a service-connected disability, and received his retirement physical examination. Colonel Treacy returns to the University of Utah until 31 July, at which time he will retire from the Army after completing 30 years of service. He proposes to remain in Salt Lake City long enough to complete work for his Ph.D. at the University. Colonel Treacy will be replaced by Col. Herbert C. Plapp, USA, who will report to the Utah Military District Headquarters 1 Aug. from the Far East.

BRIG. GEN. WILLIS R. SLAUGHTER, USA-Ret., has been elected a Vice President of The W. L. Maxson Corporation. He joined that organization in July 1954 as Plans and Programs Advisor. At the time of his retirement, he was Commanding General of the Ordnance Training Command and Commandant of the Ordnance School at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

COL. DOANE F. KIECHEL, USA-Ret., recently a member of the Armed Services Board of Contract Appeals, has retired at Washington, D. C. He entered active military service from Nebraska as a Reserve officer in Oct. 1940 and was integrated into the Regular Army in July 1946. Colonel and Mrs. Kiechel plan to return to Nebraska where he will resume the private practice of law.

Lt. Gen. Gay Heads N. M. Military School

Appointment of Lt. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, USA, as superintendent of the New Mexico Military Institute has been announced at Roswell by the Board of Regents of the Institute. General Gay will assume his post at NMMI next month with the opening of the 1955-56 school year.

He will succeed Col. Charles F. Ward, who is retiring for reasons of health after heading the New Mexico Military Institute for the past three years. Colonel Ward is completing 29 years of service to NMMI, its cadets, patrons, and alumni as a teacher of history, principal of the High School Division, and as superintendent.

For the past year General Gay has been Commanding General of the Fifth Army at Headquarters, Chicago, Ill. As such, he directed and controlled all military activities and installations in 13 states of the Middle West.

Brig. Gen. Ernest V. Holmes, USA, Artillery Commander, 4th Armored Division, Ft. Hood, Texas, will retire for physical reasons.

Coast and Geodetic Chief Ends 37 Years' Service

RAdm. Robert F. A. Studds will retire 1 August as Director of the Coast and Geodetic Survey and will make his home at Jupiter, Fla.

Admiral Studds has held the post of Director of the Bureau since May 1950. His total service covers almost 37 years.

Admiral Studds was born in Washington, D. C., on 17 Dec. 1896. He was graduated from the Catholic University of America in 1917 with a degree in civil engineering.

At the beginning of World War I he entered military service and served with the 472nd Engineers, U. S. Army, until 1919. Military Units Receive New Mobilization Register

The first major revised edition since January 1954 of the list of planned mobilization producers under the Production Allocation Program is being distributed to military installations and activities, Thomas P. Pike, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Supply and Logistics) has announced.

The "Register of Planned Mobilization Producers," formerly published in a three-volume edition as the "Alphabetical Register of Planned Wartime Materiel Suppliers," now lists in one volume approximately 30,000 "first team" manufacturers who have planned or are developing detailed mobilization production schedules for specific military items with the Army, Navy, or Air Force.

The new edition of the Register lists plants of all sizes, and includes firms whose normal peacetime production is children's toys, household appliances, refrigerators, automobiles, cosmetics, etc., but whose mobilization production could be converted to military needs during an emergency.

Although classified as "Confidential," the Register will be available for inspection by management of any firm of their specific entry only. To determine if his firm is registered, the management representative should contact the nearest major Army, Navy, or Air Force Procurement office, located in principal cities throughout the United States. This includes the Navy's Offices of Inspector of Naval Material, Army Ordnance Districts, District Engineer's Offices, and Air Force Procurement Districts.

Former Navy Employee Receives Civilian Award

The Navy's second highest honorary civilian award was presented recently to Mr. Marvin Pitkin, plans manager in the office of Development Planning at the Martin Company, Baltimore, Md., for his contribution in the development of air-launched guided missiles.

The Meritorious Civilian Service Award, signed by RADM. James S. Russell, USN, chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, was presented to Mr. Pitkin by Capt. A. E. Paddock, USN, the Bureau's Baltimore, Md., representative. Mr. Pitkin was cited for inaugurating and developing the Navy's air-launched missile program while employed at the Bureau of Aeronautics from 1947 to 1955. He recently joined the Martin Company.

Mr. Pitkin has received two previous Navy Outstanding Work Achievement awards, and was the Navy's candidate for the Lawrence Sperry award of the Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences in 1954. He collaborated with Cdr. David Holmes, USN, in writing "On the Wings of the Wind" and "Young People's book of Weather," which will be published soon.

Renegotiation Measure Makes Progress On Hill

Congressional conferees on renegotiation legislation have agreed on a two-year extension of the Renegotiation Act of 1951 with clarifying amendments, which will insure passage before Congress adjourns.

Amendments broadening the exemptions for manufacturers of standard commercial articles and services, machine tools and other "durable productive equipment" were adopted. Contracts and subcontracts subject to the Renegotiation Act would be exempted from the provisions of the Vinson-Trammel (profit-limiting) Act.

The Joint Committee on Taxation was ordered to make a survey and report to the next session of Congress on the need of any further renegotiation legislation.

President Eisenhower requested Congress in March to pass additional renegotiation legislation after the Act of 1951 had expired on 1 Jan. 1955. He stated it was needed to prevent "excessive profits" on military contracts, and especially subcontracts.

It was opposed by the large business trade associations and many individual contractors who stated that much of the "refunds" would have been paid in taxes and that if the cost to the Services, Renegotiation Board and the contractors were considered, there would be no actual saving to the government.

'Copter Flight Simulator Developed By Bell

A helicopter flight simulator has been developed by Bell Aircraft Corp. under contract with the Special Devices Center of the Office of Naval Research for training pilots quickly, inexpensively and safely.

Scheduled for installation soon at the Navy's flight school at Pensacola, Fla., the trainer, designated Model 2-FH-2, will provide the equivalent of four hours of primary flight instruction.

The trainer consists of three main components: a projector, a pilot's compartment and a computer. The simulator is expected to shorten the time required for a student to solo and also contribute to the quality and efficiency of the Navy's helicopter training program.

The illusion of flight is created by the projection of a small, brilliant light through a miniature landscape in a plastic transparency over the pilot's head. The pilot's compartment is a replica of an actual Bell Model 47 helicopter, equipped with dual controls. From a separate control panel, the instructor can simulate a variety of changes in flight conditions.

Army Transportation Receives First Hydraulic Transmission Locomotive

The first hydraulic transmission locomotive in American history was added to the Army's rolling stock on 14 July in a ceremony which also marked the 13th Anniversary of the Army Transportation Corps and the 125th Anniversary of the U. S. railroad industry.

The new train engine, the Army said, can be operated and serviced by "virtually any soldier."

Operation of present electric diesel locomotives requires highly trained electrical experts.

The entire hydraulic transmission mechanism of the new engine can be removed and replaced in one rapid operation, enabling the locomotive to remain in almost constant service.

Maj. Gen. Paul F. Yount, USA, Chief of Army Transportation, accepted the new locomotive from Mr. George A. Rentschler, Board Chairman of the Baldwin-Lima-Hamilton Corp., the builders. Also participating in the ceremony were Assistant Secretary of the Army Frank W. Higgins; Mr. William T. Faricy, President of the Association of American Railroads, and Maj. Gen. Robert M. Littlejohn, USA-Ret., WWII Chief Quartermaster in the European Theatre.

As he turned the locomotive over to General Yount, Mr. Rentschler predicted that it will be "the forerunner of the next revolutionary and progressive step in American railroading—the new lightweight train."

Another "first" was recorded during the ceremony when the locomotive was named the "General Nathaniel Greene I," after the American Revolution officer who improvised a wagon train to supply the Continental Army. Although ships and airplanes are honored, the locomotive was the first in Army history to be given a name.

Powered by a single Caterpillar D-397 engine, the new locomotive uses a torque converter to transmit engine power direct to the wheels. It weighs 48 tons and can be adapted to four different track gauges ranging from 56½" to 66".

The Army Transportation Corps' Transportation Research and Development Command, Ft. Eustis, Va., and the Baldwin-Lima-Hamilton Corp. developed the engine jointly. General Yount noted that the locomotive is "the end product of many months of mutual research, development and cooperation."

C., which loaded and lashed down most of the cargo airlifted north from Mont Joli, Quebec; the 4418th Communications Group which set up teletype equipment tying Canadian stations in with 18th Air Force headquarters; and the 18th Air Force headquarters, which furnished pilots, radio operators and navigators for ski-equipped Northeast Air Command C-47s, staff officers to direct operations at Frobisher Bay and a coordination center at Montreal, transport movement control personnel to keep track of the planes and their missions, communications personnel who maintained continuous around the clock contact between the 18th Air Force and the far-flung operating locations, and many other people who worked on operations, logistics and personnel planning on the operation.

UNITS COVERED by General McCarty's wire of commendation included the Royal Canadian Air Force commands at Edmonton Air Base, Alberta; Churchill, Manitoba; and Frobisher Bay, Northwest Territories. The RCAF furnished quarters and food, use of hangars, shops and offices, major maintenance and repair assistance, weather and communications, search and rescue planes and personnel, and generous hospitality.

"We can't say too much about the magnificent hospitality and helpfulness of the RCAF," said Col. William G. Forwood, 63d Troop Carrier Group commander, whose C-124s operated out of Edmonton, Alberta. "Everyone was splendid in their treatment of our people, our planes and our problems."

USAF Units Cited

Other USAF units cited in General McCarty's wire of commendation were:

Northeast Air Command, for housing and other logistical support at Frobisher Bay, Baffinland, H-19 helicopters flying in Baffinland to locate ice sites and carry out other missions, medical services for 18th Air Force personnel injured on Ice Cube missions, and ski-equipped C-47s which were used to transport ice survey teams into the sites to determine whether or not it would be safe to land the big C-124 Globemasters. The C-47s, carrying teams of ice scientists from the Air University and the Army's Snow, Ice, Permafrost Establishment, landed at frozen lakes and bays all over the Arctic to test the thickness and probable durability of the ice. Many 18th Air Force headquarters personnel flew as crew members on these NEAC C-47s, which were sometimes gone for several days at a time, flying from site to site, the people on board camping out on the ice. The C-47s also airlifted supplies to the ice sites.

Air Materiel Command, for logistical and maintenance support of Project Ice Cube, particularly for expedited action on getting aircraft parts and engines required to keep the big 18th Air Force C-124s in continuous operation during the maximum effort operation. Air Materiel Command was responsible for providing most of the refueling trucks, fire trucks, fork lifts, loading trucks, radar vans and other equipment which was airlifted to the Arctic by the 18th Air Force in support of DEWline, permitting operations at bases which had been long inactive or completely closed, and at the ice sites.

Ninety civilian aircraft maintenance men from the Warner Robins Air Materiel Area, Macon, Ga., 10 civilians from the Oklahoma Air Materiel Area at Tinker AFB, and 34 airmen from the 2091st Aircraft Repair Squadron of Mobile, Ala., a part of the 2900th Air Depot Wing of Kelly AFB, Tex., have been working for months at Donaldson AFB, S. C. to support the maintenance of the DEWline C-124s. All major maintenance on the 63d Wing Globemasters has been carried out at Donaldson.

The 1607th Air Transport Group, Military Air Transport Service, Dover, Del., for the loan of five C-124s and their crews, which flew DEWline missions under the operational control of the 18th Air Force out of Churchill, Manitoba and Mont Joli, Quebec.

The 545th Troop Carrier Squadron of the Alaskan Air Command at Elmendorf AFB, Alaska, for the loan of two C-124s and their crews, which flew DEWline missions under the operational control of the 18th Air Force out of Edmonton, Alberta.

The 1800th AACs Wing of Tinker AFB, Okla., for furnishing radar vans and personnel at Mont Joli, Quebec and Churchill, Manitoba.

The Air University of Maxwell AFB, Ala., for furnishing teams of ice scientists, headed by Lt. Col. Donald Shaw, Lt. Col. Louis De Goes, and Doctor Maxwell, which flew to prospective ice landing sites in ski-equipped NEAC C-47s to test ice thickness and estimate strength and durability. Only after the sites were cleared by the ice teams, were the 18th Air Force aircraft permitted to land.

Army Units Cited

Two U. S. Army units were cited by General McCarty.

The Snow, Ice, Permafrost Establishment of Wilmette, Ill., for sending ice teams to work with the 18th Air Force in the central Canadian Arctic, carrying out survey missions in partnership with the Air University ice scientists.

The 1st Engineer Arctic Test Force of Fort Belvoir, Va., for sending Army Lt. Col. Arthur H. Lahlum, an Arctic expert, as a technical adviser.

ESKIMOS help crew members of the 62d Carrier Wing offload a big Caterpillar Scraper from a Douglas C-124 Globemaster. The temperature is 57 degrees below zero. Eighteenth AF Douglas C-124's, loaded by 1st Aerial Port Squadron airmen from Donaldson AFB, S. C., have completed Operation Big Haul, the airlift of more than 6,600 tons of tractors, prefabricated buildings, and building materials to northern air bases. The airlift job was done by the 62d Troop Carrier Wing of Larson AFB, Wash. Other phases of the DEWline airlift project are being carried out by the 63d Troop Carrier Wing of Donaldson AFB, S. C., with an assist from the Fairchild C-119 Flying Boxcars of the 314th Troop Carrier Wing of Sewart AFB, Tenn. The CAT tractors serve as the trucks of the northland.

Navy Reclassifies 13 WWII Minesweepers

The Navy has reverted 13 DSM's (Destroyer Minesweepers) to their previous DD (Destroyer) classifications.

Originally, the ships were converted to minesweepers in WWII. Several of them have also seen service in Far Eastern waters during the Korean War.

The decision to remove their mine-sweeping gear, the Navy said, is based on the fact that during the Korean War they performed more often on missions which would normally be assigned to destroyers—bombardment and patrol.

In addition, it was stated, these WWII-vintage ships are being replaced by others equipped with the latest in mine-sweeping equipment.

The new classifications became effective on 15 July.

Listed below are the names of the ships, their old designations and their new classifications:

Fitch, DSM 25, to DD 462; Gherardi, DSM 30, to DD 637; Mervine, DMS 31, to DD 489; Quick, DMS 32, to DD 490; Carmick, DMS 33, to DD 493; Endicott, DMS 35, to DD 495; McCook, DMS 36, to DD 496; Davison, DMS 37, to 618; Thompson, DMS 38, to DD 627; Cowie, DMS 39, to DD 632; Knight, DMS 40, to DD 633; Doran, DMS 41, to DD 634; and Earle, DMS 42, to DD 635.

84th Congress Hits The Mark For Military Families, But Also Records Some Misses

The legislative balance sheet for military families is moving out of the red as the 84th Congress prepares to end its first session.

New laws on the debit side of the Armed Services ledger are in the majority. A handful of others will be enacted before adjournment (ultimate outcome of some, such as the National Reserve Plan and the Survivor Benefits bill, was still uncertain this week).

A number of important proposals failed to hit the mark, and some actions of the Congress will hamper efforts to increase Service career attractiveness.

Here are the hits and misses of the 84th Congress as they affect the military:

HITS

- Basic pay was increased by amounts ranging from six to 25 per cent.
- Incentive and hazardous duty pay rates were boosted.
- Per diem rates were increased from $9 to $12.
- A dislocation allowance was established to help pay the excessive costs of Service-family moves to new duty stations.
- A trailer allowance was created to give Service trailer-families assistance in the shipment of their household goods upon transfer.
- The construction of about 17,000 new family homes was authorized.
- Bigger and better homes for Service families were assured with approval of increased ceilings on construction costs and added floor space.
- To meet military manpower requirements, the draft was extended for four years and the doctor draft for two.
- The dependent schooling allowance was boosted from $235 to $240.
- Increased assignment stability was assured when the Congress voted to restrict funds used by the Services for permanent changes of station.
- The Dependents Assistance Act was extended for four more years.
- The duty-free importation of household and personal effects of military families returning from overseas was extended for three years.
- Laws which prohibited certain military personnel from being paid more than once a month were wiped off the books.
- The Defense Department was given authority to make advance payments of pay and allowances to Servicemen for their return home when released from active duty or training duty.
- Service personnel were granted the right to designate a beneficiary or beneficiaries to receive their back pay and allowances and other amounts due them at time of death.
- Reservists ordered to active duty because of a war or national emergency are permitted to draw active duty pay in lieu of their Reserve benefits.

Dual Pay Proposal Goes To Senate

The Senate Finance Committee has favorably reported the House-passed dual compensation bill and sent the measure to the Senate floor. Enactment is expected before Congress adjourns.

The measure boosts the present $3,000 limitation on dual compensation to $10,000 for many officers on the disability retirement rolls (THE JOURNAL, 2 July).

Meanwhile, a Civil Service Commission study of dual compensation laws, including draft legislation to liberalize present restrictions for all categories of retired officers is being held up pending final approval of the Commissioners. It is not expected that the proposal will clear the Budget Bureau in time for presentation to the Congress during the current session.

Adm. Hubbard Named J-4 In FE Command

RAdm. Miles H. Hubbard, USN, has been named Assistant Chief of Staff, J-4 (Logistics) in the Far East and United Nations Commands.

He succeeds Col. George Kimpe, USA, who has been acting ACOS, J-4, since April, and who will become Deputy ACOS, J-4. Admiral Hubbard formerly was Chief of Staff, Commander Sixth Fleet.

MISSSES

- Military families will continue to pay higher grocery bills because a surcharge imposed on commissary purchases was extended for another year.
- Senior service officers will be burdened with a 11,000-lb. limitation on the amount of household goods they can ship to new duty stations.
- The Services will be prevented from training officers in legal work because of continued restrictions in this field.
- In addition, because Congress failed to act on proposed legislation or because the Pentagon failed to get the proposals to the Capitol in time:
 - Medical care of military dependents will continue to be inadequate.
 - Service personnel living in substandard quarters will continue to pay out their full rental allowance for shoddy accommodations.
 - Reserve officers severed from the Service after long years of active duty will have to readjust to civil life without the Government assistance afforded Regular officers forced out because of selection failure.
 - The Army and Air Force will have to get along for at least another six months without permanent authority to integrate active duty Reserve officers into Regular ranks.

Senate Unit Ponders Survivor Bill

The fate of the multi-million dollar Survivor Benefits Bill in this session of Congress hinges on the outcome of a Senate Finance Committee meeting in progress as THE JOURNAL went to press.

The Committee Chairman, Senator Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.) called his group together for a briefing on the proposal which places all military personnel under Social Security and increases benefits for 185,000 Service widows, dependent children and parents.

A Committee spokesman said the meeting will determine whether the measure will be sent to the Senate floor before adjournment or whether it will be held over until the second session beginning next January.

As approved by the House, the plan increases the compensation for Service widows from a present high of $87 to amounts ranging from $112 to $242, based on the rank and service of the deceased. It also increases the minimum six months' death gratuity from $469 to $800 and lowers the top payment from $6,857 to $3,000.

All FECA benefits for Reservists are eliminated by the measure as is the present $10,000 free insurance.

Navy Allows Stateside Officers To Wear Tropical Uniforms; Not Much Hope For D.C.

Thousands of Stateside Navy officers soon may be sporting the tropical white uniform which is now being worn by five overseas commands.

A change to Uniform Regulations just issued by the Navy states that "tropical uniforms shall be worn in hot weather when considered suitable by prescribing authority." Before the uniform regulation revision, the use of the white uniform was restricted to "tropical climate only."

In effect, the changed regulation permits Stateside District Commanders to prescribe the comfortable whites at their discretion.

Most likely the use of the open-necked shirt, with shoulder boards, and long trousers or shorts will be allowed for officers in the Southern part of the United States. There is little likelihood, however, that such a move will be made in Washington, D. C. It is known that high-ranking Naval officers in the Nation's Capital frown upon the idea.

USN Medical Personnel May Wear USMC Garb

Navy medical officers and hospital corpsmen assigned to Marine Corps units again are allowed to wear the Marine uniform.

USN medical personnel had been permitted to wear Marine garb up until 1954 when it was decreed that only Navy men in combat or under training conditions would be authorized to wear USMC utility clothing or battle dress.

Subsequent experience, the Navy says, proved the restricted policy had an adverse effect on unit esprit de corps and identity. As a result it was decided to revert to the former system. Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas approved the decision on 23 June.

RAdm. Curtis Gets Three Stars

The Senate has confirmed the nomination of RAdm. Maurice E. Curtis, USN, to serve in three-star rank as Deputy Commander-in-Chief, Pacific.

Retirement Act of 1930.

USCG COMPENSATORY ABSENCE—S. 2566, Sen. Magnuson (D-Wash), provides for compensatory absence of Coast Guard military personnel serving at isolated aids to navigation.

LCDR. DARRELL C. WILLIAMS—S. 2567, Sen. Chavez (D-NM), authorizes the appointment and retirement of Darrell C. Williams as a LCDR, USN.

NAVY JAG CORPS—HR 7420, Rep. Church (R-Ill), establishes certain Defense Dept. offices and creates a JAG Corps for the Navy.

ST. THOMAS FACILITIES—HR 7439, Rep. Vinson (D-Ga), authorizes and directs SecNav to transfer certain property located in St. Thomas, V.I., to the Virgin Islands Corp.

Committee Action

The House Armed Services Committee has favorably reported the following bills:

ROTC FLIGHT TRAINING—HR 5738, authorizes active flying training for Army and AF ROTC students.

CITADEL DONATIONS—HJ Res 261, permits the Army Secretary to make certain donations to The Citadel.
